SERVICE LIMITATIONS

As an IP Telephony service, voice calls will be impacted by any power failure that causes local data connectivity to fail.

During a local power failure, you will not be able to use your service for calls including Emergency '000' or alarm services.

Capacity for concurrent calls is limited to the available bandwidth of the internet access service at that site. We recommend that your underlying internet access service provides sufficient bandwidth to support all your voice line traffic in each direction, in order to ensure your service voice quality.
